The "Little Shop of Horrors" musical has been running in New York City for around a year already, and has won a number of awards. I think that it was playing Off-Broadway, and won the Best Musical Obie (the Obie is the Off-Broadway equivalent to the Tony). It is now on the road, and only in Boston for the month of August. I have read that the people who made the musical are planning to make a movie out of it.

Why do you refer to "Little Shop" as SF? It certainly is horror, but I don't remember any science in the Corman movie, and I doubt that there is any in the musical.

While we're talking about the movie, Off the Wall in Cambridge is going to be showing it starting August 31, running for about a week or two I think.
