
Subject: Rand Paul to push legislation nullifying Obama's executive actions on guns
Posted by CyberkNight on Thu, 17 Jan 2013 14:27:22 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul plans to introduce legislation in Congress soon nullifying the executive orders on guns announced by President Barack Obama on Wednesday, a source familiar with the plans confirmed to The Daily Caller.

The Republican legislator plans to reveal his plans for legislation during an appearance on Sean Hannity's show on Fox News on Wednesday night, the source said.

Obama on Wednesday announced during a White House ceremony that he plans to initiate 23 executive actions meant to curb gun violence in the wake of the Newtown, Conn., massacre last year.

The news was first reported during the Fox News show "The Five" on Wednesday by anchor Eric Bolling.

"I'm told Sen. Rand Paul will introduce language within hours, within hours, to call for the nullification and prohibition of funding for the president's executive actions announced today and possibly even using the federal courts to nullify and defund some of the things that he plans on doing," Bolling said.

Full article: <http://dailycaller.com/2013/01/16/sources-rand-paul-to-push-legislation-nullifying-obamas-executive-orders-on-guns/>
