Silent Debuggers is one of THE scariest games I've ever played. So suspenseful. The only fps I've seen that comes anywhere close is Aliens vs. Predator for the PC. Has anyone ever beaten Silent Debuggers? I've never gotten too far because I can never get to the aliens fast enough before the blocks start getting sealed off. Perhaps I'm just incompetent...

I remember beating Silent Debuggers way back in the day... it was pretty hard, so I wouldn't say you are incompetent. I don't remember how many times I had to replay some of the levels to get past them. (: In fact, until seeing this post, I thought I was the only person alive that loved that game... I would always use it to show the turbo off to my friends (before I got the Duo, that is). It's the only FPS I've ever liked, probably because of the cinemas between and during the levels... they actually keep you mindful of your mission so you don't just feel like you are walking around in vain.

And seeing this post reminds me of a question I've never been able to find an answer for:

Does anyone know what the secret is on that one level? Leon says something like, "Sensors show there may be a secret on this level", in the mission briefing... and when you are in the hallways, he calls you to say, "...there is a secret in this area". I remember playing that level for days trying to find a secret... walking around backwards (ala Order of the Griffon), shooting up walls, pulling my hair out...

If anyone knows what that secret is- please tell me... I'll mail you a warm apple pie or something. (;

Subject: Turbo Newbie Needs Advice

Hey Turbo-List People,

I'm a relative newcomer to the Turbo world, although I had played a Turbo when it first hit the market. In fact, I asked my parents for a Turbo at the time and got a Genesis instead. The nerve! In any event, here's what I'd like to know. What are the MUST OWN Hu-Card and CD games? I like shooters, RPGs, puzzle games, and just about every other genre of game.

Thanks in advance for the suggestions!

Sincerely,

-Ian Johnston
