        Does anyone remember the "remember"/ core dump scene in ST II ? Was it really there, or was this filmed for STIII??

The "core dump" sequence really was in STII. It just happened so fast that you didn't really have time to think about it until later; there was too much else going on at the moment to stop and ponder that action, and thus it tends to get lost in the "remembering."

Yup, it was there. The only people who might not have seen it are those who were involved in the pre-release screenings. It was added when Harve Bennett (co-writer/producer) decided (from the reactions to the screenings) that he wanted to leave room to bring Spock back in the next "episode". They also added the shot of the casket having landed on the Geesis planet, and some of the dialogue/monologue at the end (McCoy:
"He's not really dead, as long as we remember him," Kirk: "I know I must return...", and Kirk: "Spock said 'There are always possibilities.'").

I don't remember myself, but a friend of mine rented a tape of STII:
TWoK a day before seeing STIII, and he said this clip was indeed in STII. Of course, they may have put it in the tape when they made it...
